Program Topic: “Changing Competencies for Quality Professionals”

John is sharing content from Paul Grizzell, as presented at the 2018 WCQI in Seattle:

The presentation starts with a 2016 ASQ Study regarding management’s perspective of what they believe the Quality Pro should be doing for an organization. Per analysis of the study, the Quality Pro should be a GoTo person vs a Guru, who helps others to engage in problem solving and expand beyond the typical “control” functions.

The Quality Pro must truly be an organizational manager / leader who understands the complete business and assures the Quality function is a value added work group. He / She must be a Change Advocate/Leader, recognizing the change is mandatory in business today.

The wrap-up will include what YOU would do back in your home organization, to treat other department (eng, mfg, suppliers) as customers, supporting their needs.

Speaker: John Breckline, ASQ Fellow, Regional Director (AR, OK, N.TX)

- John has been a full time member of ASQ since 1987, after sporadic membership in the 10 years prior. He is an ASQ Fellow and has served on the Greater Fort Worth Section’s Leadership Committee since 1997 in various positions, including multiple terms as Section Chair.
- He holds multiple ASQ Certifications and teaches the CMQ, CQPA, CSQP and SSGB classes in the DFW area. He is a Master Black Belt, owning his own consulting company, Key Quality since 1999.

- His experience has taken him from a stock-handler, to Quality inspector and technician, continuing to Quality Engineer, Supplier Quality Manager, QMS Manager, Continuous Improvement Manager, and MBB in Motorola, Nokia, and AT&T. Various consulting gigs have given him additional experience in multiple other companies and industries.
 - As John has “grown up in quality”, he can speak to the changes he has seen in his career spanning over 30 years.

Tutorial 1 (General): “Addressing Risk in the Supply Chain – Part 1”

In May, Satya provided an overview of Risk Management. At the end of that presentation, he asked the members what topics they would like more information on, with the intent of starting a series of those topics.

Based on the feedback, Supplier Chain Risks were at the top of the list. We identified several sub-topics within the Supplier Chain category to include Supplier Selection, Tooling & First Article Approval, and Ongoing Production.

This presentation will start the content above and will continue until the Supplier Chain risks and methods to manage them are fully explored.

Future session in the fall will include risks in the following: Process, Operations, Customer, and perhaps Technology / New Product Development.

Tutorial 2: “Informational Interviewing”

Informational Interviewing is an excellent, but often neglected, job search and sales tool. Informational Interviewing has its title for a reason; meeting with people to obtain information that can be beneficial in a job search or beneficial about learning of needs of prospective clients (your manager or internal / external customers).

Relating to job search, "The potential candidate (you) ask general questions about the nature of the company or the industry, and the "insider" learns about the potential candidate's professional character at the same time. The information interview helps overcome a problem with most discussions in a recruiting/job-seeking process, where each side is hesitant to talk to the other because they are uncertain about whether they might be wasting their time with an unqualified candidate or unsuitable workplace. In contrast, "the informational interview provides a non-threatening forum" for discussion as the two sides learn about each other [Wikipedia & Dawn Rosenberg McKay].

Learning Objectives:

- Benefits of Informational Interview over Resumes
- Informational Interview Process
- Potential Informational Interview Results
