Program Topic: "Fuel Your Fire and Avoid Burnout"

Description:

The barrage of information coming at us from multiple sources (e.g., texts, email, tweets, blogs, alerts), coupled with the demands of our careers, are overwhelming and distracting. The sheer volume of information threatens our ability to think clearly and make wise decisions about what's important. If we react to these stimuli without clear discernment, we fail to accomplish the goals that matter most in our professional and personal lives. Supported by science and years of experience, the speaker will share methods that produce measurable increase in productivity and provide a renewed sense of engagement and accomplishment. This presentation will inspire participants to dramatically increase their ability to achieve life's most important outcomes.
