Program Topic: “Remote Work: A Manager’s Roadmap”

The great emergence of remote work as a predominant mode of operation has brought forth a host of challenges and opportunities for leaders across industries. What was once mostly imagined on television and movies as a business model for the rich and famous has now become the everyday reality in just about every industry globally.

Remote work now affects the majority of people in some respect. Whether it be leading their own team, or partnering with remote colleagues, we will explore the dynamics of leading/working in remote work environments and focus on the strategies essential for navigating this evolving landscape.

Effective communication lies at the heart of remote work and leadership, requiring leaders to utilize various channels to ensure clarity, alignment, and engagement. We will also explore some of the pitfalls that can upend and ultimately stand in the way of their success. Additionally, we will explore the strategies that you and your team can utilize to ensure that remote work does not negatively affect your company, your stakeholders, and your internal & external customers.
